Myles is an Associate in the Commercial Litigation and Dispute Resolution Department. He advises and represents clients in complex commercial disputes across a broad range of industries, with particular experience in contractual disputes, construction and engineering matters, insolvency, corporate disputes and commercial recoveries.

Recognised for his analytical approach and strategic thinking, Myles regularly assists clients in navigating technically complex and high-value disputes. He is committed to delivering practical, commercially driven solutions that advance his clients' interests while maintaining a clear focus on achieving favourable outcomes.

Myles specialises in commercial litigation and dispute resolution, acting for clients in a wide range of complex commercial matters. His experience includes contractual disputes, shareholder and director disputes, insolvency proceedings, construction and engineering disputes, debt recovery, and other commercial litigation before the High Court and various dispute resolution forums.

He has acted for a diverse range of clients, including financial institutions, state-owned entities, FMCG manufacturers, mining companies, technology businesses, property developers and private corporations. He has further been involved in numerous arbitration proceedings and alternative dispute resolution processes, providing strategic advice and representation throughout all stages of the dispute resolution process.

In addition to his dispute resolution practice, Myles has a strong commercial background, having been involved in commercial transactions, due diligence investigations and significant mergers and acquisitions. This experience provides him with valuable insight into the commercial realities underpinning complex business disputes and enhances his ability to deliver commercially astute legal solutions.
